Guadeloupe Island (French Antillas, FK96HF) qrv on 144 MHz EME since 29.12.2010! LATEST NEWS, from Phil, dated 2011-01-06: hi all, Sunny day today, so we have made some visits. Tomorrow till monday I will try to be on air most of the time of the moon path. Be carefull about my frequency! it can change because birdies. 143 is very bad now so I will use 139 or 136 but the best is to have a look on N0UK EME site. I hope to qso the missing stations during this week end. A special attention will be done for the JA station as soon as we will have a common window. GL all 73 - also use:

DX0DX DXpedition to Spratly Islands in January 2011 - LATEST DX0, SPRATLY ISLANDS Update 2011-01-04: Murphy has been hitting us recently. Been having problems getting equipment out of customs, but finally seeing light at the end of the tunnel. All equipment is expected to be in Puerto Princesa, Palawan, on the morning of January 5th. Thereafter, the gear will then need to be sent to Pag-Asa. Some operators are also having weather related problems enroute to DU, thus delaying them. Additionally, the charter flight company advised that the plane to Pag-Asa will be delayed leaving Manila by a day. Thus, DX0DX start-up is delayed too.

Norfolk Island (RG30XX) DX Expedition, 2011 LATEST NEWS from Guy, VK2KU, dated 2011-01-06: VK9NA operations will begin on the local morning of Sunday 9 January after setting up on the previous day. At the other end the 19th is likely to be the final day of operation, leaving the 20th for packing up.
EME on 2m is only one facet of the expedition, but they will try to be QRV on EME as much as possible. Moonrise on Norfolk Island on 9th January (local) is at 2210-1 UTC, ie at 2210 on 8th January (UTC date). The team have chosen 144.125MHz (in 1st period) for their 2m operations, both terrestrial and EME. It would be appreciated if others who regularly operate on this frequency would make way for this rare DXCC operation. Given the likely pileup on 144.125, it might be best to leave 144.124 - 144.126MHz clear of unrelated signals. Good luck to all

 VK9L, LORD HOWE ISLAND, qrv HF and 50 MHz **

Christopher, VK5CP, has once again return to Lord Howe Island (OC-004) and will be active as VK5CP/VK9L until January 7th. According to "DX-World.Net", Chris states, "I am using a half wave dipole at 10m, an IC7000 and a LDG tuner. Power is about 50w. I can hear very well but my signal is weak (sorry, but the 14Kg luggage limit did not allow me to bring the Alpha 87A). I am working SSB only 80-6m. Please QSL to VK5CP. I will make a special QSL for VK5CP/VK9L."
